FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

American College of Cardiology Returns to HighWire

WASHINGTON, DC & REDWOOD CITY, CA, USA – November 18, 2015 – HighWire Press, Inc., the leading technology platform and strategic partner to influential scholarly publishers and societies, is partnering with the American College of Cardiology to host their online research content.

The ACC will move their flagship journal, the Journal of the American College of Cardiology (JACC), as well as four other established journals, JACC: Cardiovascular Imaging, JACC: Cardiovascular Interventions, JACC: Heart Failure, and JACC: Clinical Electrophysiology back to the HighWire Open Platform in the coming months. A new open access title, JACC: Basic Translational Research, is already in development and will launch on HighWire in early 2016.

“We look forward to the opportunity to develop new ideas with HighWire’s innovative technology,” said Kim Murphy, Publishing Director at American College of Cardiology. “HighWire is a trusted partner; we were very impressed with the depth of content, connections and transparency conveyed at this year’s HighWire publishers’ meetings.”

“We are very pleased to welcome ACC back to the HighWire community,” said Dan Filby, HighWire’s CEO. “The College is strategically focused on increasing member engagement and enhancing the reader experience and the HighWire team is committed to helping them reach their goals.”

About ACC

The American College of Cardiology is a 49,000-member medical society that is the professional home for the entire cardiovascular care team. The mission of the College is to transform cardiovascular care and to improve heart health. The ACC leads in the formation of health policy, standards and guidelines. The College operates national registries to measure and improve care, provides professional medical education, disseminates cardiovascular research and bestows credentials upon cardiovascular specialists who meet stringent qualifications.
